

PARLIAMENT IS MUCH DIVIDED

The Make-Up Of The New English Lower House Is Peculiar In The Extreme.

LIBERALS ARE STILL IN CONTROL

Labor Party Have Not Enough To Really Count For Much In The Voting On Matters Of Importance.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Feb. 13.—James William Lowther was unanimously elected speaker of the House of Commons today. The house adjourned until tomorrow without transacting any other business.

The fact that the Liberals have a clear majority of 55 over all combinations between Unionists, Nationalists and Laborites in the new Parliament, has completely upset calculations as to the course of events of probable legislation during the session of Parliament for which the members assembled today. Before the extent of the victory had been realized it was expected that the policy of the government on many important issues would be largely controlled by the Labor party and to a lesser extent by the Nationalists, or by a combination of the two. With a clear majority of 55 behind him Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman can carry out the general Liberal program without running much risk. But there are questions on which the party is not a unit and which will cause the session to be troubled if not stormy. One of the first and by no means the easiest task of the new government will be the tackling of the education acts of 1902-3, which have been the cause of so many long debates both in and out of Parliament. Those who are demanding amendments to the acts claim that the mandate from the electors is clear: "genuine popular control. No religious tests for teachers." There are differences of opinion as to how the changes are to be carried out, but on the principles they agree. In detail they ask for a great proportion of the cost of education to be charged upon the Imperial Exchequer, the training of teachers to be made of an Imperial rather than a local charge, the appointment of teachers to be under local control, but that no conditions of employment shall include the compulsory giving or receiving of denominational religious instruction; that parents have the right to send their children to some other place than the school for the purpose of receiving a specific denominational instruction at the hands of their religious pastors; subjects to their elementary schools to be opened each morning with a simply family religious service. In all this they expect powerful resistance on the part of Anglicans, with possible combinations against them among other denominations. In any event a change in the education act is a pledge to which the Liberal Party in general and the Premier in particular are positively committed.

That the act will be changed by a large majority vote in the Commons goes without saying, but the difficulty in carrying out the pledge to the people comes when the amendments reach the House of Lords.

The disestablishment of the Anglican Church in Wales is another question bound to be raised, on which the different denominations will clash, but it is rather early to forecast the Government's intentions in respect to this.

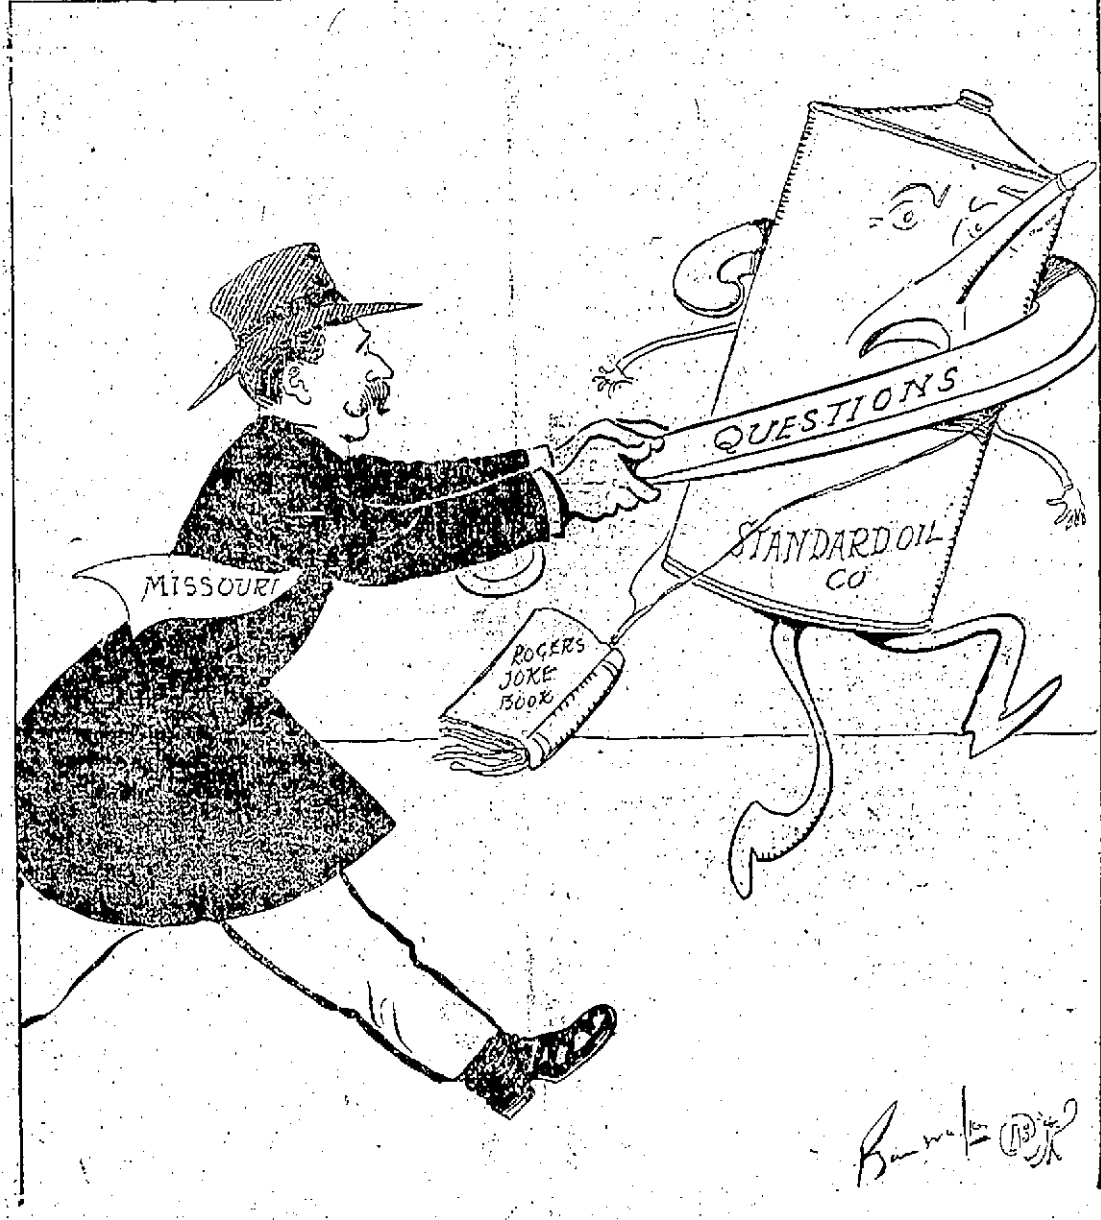

Changes in the Irish policy leading to what the Premier describes "the larger policy" may be expected. Home Rule is still far off, though Irishmen profess to have some hope as a result of the introduction of a strong Labor Party. The Labor candidates were supported by Irishmen as against Liberals, they favoring an Irish Parliament. With the support of but 50 Laborites the Nationalists cannot hope to attain their ends but in addition to labor there exists in the present Parliament a Home Rule element outside the Liberal Party. Should Labor gain strength and elect another hundred members at the next election absolute Home Rule will be sight. Modified Home Rule putting an Irish House absolutely subservient to the Imperial Parliament might be an outcome of the life of the present Parliament and be accepted as a compromise by the House of Lords. There is no reason to believe that Labor will lose the strength that it has gained. In fact the leaders have announced their intention of contesting every by-election where they have the faintest hopes of success and Home Rule claim that absolute Home Rule will come with the next elections. The greatest question at present, however, is: What will be the policy of the 50 Labor members who have secured seats at Westminster. There are two distinct groups of Labor members but on the main subjects in which Labor is interested they are agreed. The Parliamentary Committee of Trades Union Congress which endorsed 30 of the 50 successful Labor candidates has drawn up a general program which includes a Trades Disputes Bill; amendment of the compensation act; amendment of the truck act; amendment of the factory acts; amendment of the unemployed act; abolition of Chinese labor in South Africa; establishment of a state pension fund at sixty years of age; extension of the housing of the working classes act; establishment of an eight hour working day adult suffrage and generally for the maintenance of Free Trade, amendment of the education act, popular control of the liquor trade, and Nationalization of means of transit and natural resources in the Kingdom. The Trades Disputes Bill is placed first by Laborites as it aims at restoring the legal status of trades unions which was denied by the Taff Vale decision.

Among the amendments proposed to the compensation act is one providing "that some system of State compulsory insurance should be established which will secure that employees shall have paid the necessary funds to compensate for all accidents or injury, or for diseases arising out of or incidental to the nature of any employment."

The Amendments to the Truck Act aims at "preventing stoppages of any description from wages," the amendment of the unemployed act is desired "so that employment can be found at trade union rates for those unable to find work." The old age pension proposal is the establishment of a scheme to provide all citizens over 65 years of age with a pension of at least five shillings a week, the entire cost to be borne by the Imperial Exchequer. The miners delegates brought to the front eight hour working day to the front but the Trades Union Congress proposes that any union if it so wishes can have its trade exempted. There is also a difference of opinion respecting adult suffrage, some of the unions favoring women suffrage and others opposing it. Labor members endorsed by the Congress are pledged to an amendment to the education act securing educational freedom and state maintenance, compulsory attendance up to 16 years of age; secular education in state supported schools; establishment of training schools for teachers. Beyond the program outlined labor members are free to support or oppose the government but generally they will be guided by their leaders.

Keir Hardie, the leader of the group supported by the labor representative committee, in an article, has pointed out that he and his followers have "no option but to sit in opposition, since to do anything else would be to belie their professions of political independence. In all probability a sessional policy will be decided upon. Needless to say each measure introduced by the government will be judged upon its merits but from time to time the party will be under the necessity of taking its bearings and of deciding how far its duty consists in giving a general support to the government, or of entering upon a militant policy to force the hands of the government in respect to certain measures." Mr. Hardie expects the first conflict between the labor members and the government to arise over the question of legislation to restore freedom of action to the trade unions.

Labor has many questions which they will ask Parliament to consider and if the labor members have their way a great part of the session will be devoted to their bills.

PEORIA EDITOR NOT TO BLAME

Did Not Intend To Advise Rev. Simmons To Commit Suicide, In Conversation.

SOUGHT TO COVER UP THE SCANDAL

Being In Possession Of Facts Concerning The Preacher-Banker's Miscomings, He Wanted To Hush Things Up.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 13.—That H. M. Pindell, editor of the Journal, in this city, did not drive Dr. George Simmons, the preacher-banker who committed suicide, to take his life by giving him the alternatives of killing himself or fleeing the city, has been proved by the statement published in the Peoria Star and written by Eugene Baldwin, editor of that paper. Mr. Baldwin was present when the conversation between Simmons and Pindell took place in the Star office, and since the suicide of Dr. Simmons is the one witness besides Pindell himself who is in position to relate the precise happenings at that interview. After telling the events leading up to that point, Mr. Baldwin's explanation is as follows:

Not Offered as Advice.

"Then Pindell stopped and said, partly to himself, as if he were thinking aloud and considering only the effect of the scandal upon the city: 'There are only two things to do. One is to run away, the other to commit suicide.' Evidently Pindell had no idea that Simmons would take this as advice. He didn't offer it as advice, but in fact, what other course was possible?"

"What Pindell had in his mind was that Simmons was ruined in this community forever, that he could escape from the charge only by going to some distant place, changing his name and altering his whole life. In doing this Pindell was looking at the question in an abstract way, and he had no idea that Simmons would act on it or consider it as advice. In fact he said it more to himself than he did to Simmons."

Prosecutor Answers Question.

Baldwin's previous vigorous attacks on Pindell in connection with other matters render his explanation in this instance more conspicuous than it otherwise would have been. An investigation of the attitude of State's Attorney Scholes in quoting to newspaper reporters the law relating to the guilt of persons accessory before the fact shows the state's attorney's citation of this law to have been purely academic and given at the request of the reporters present.

"I did not mean to convey the impression to the newspaper men," said Attorney Scholes, "that Pindell had done anything to bring him within the law in this case. I was asked a hypothetical question, and, in answer, read a paragraph from the criminal code."

Sought to Protect City.

It is generally acknowledged here that Mr. Pindell, before the conversation between himself, Simmons and Baldwin, took the lead in trying to find a solution of the impending scandal whereby Peoria could be kept free from another blow which, it was believed, would prove as detrimental to the city's good name as the Dougherty scandal. For this reason he and the other newspaper editors suppressed the matter to give Simmons a chance to prove his innocence or, if he could not do so, to protect the public interests. Pindell's musing utterance, to the effect that but the two courses were open to Simmons was construed here as the natural remark of a man who had in his possession the information Pindell had, and who was face to face with the man accused of the heinous practices, practically admitted by Simmons. Pindell's course in this respect, as well as in trying to protect the city's interests, was generally approved and brought him congratulations from many of the prominent men of Peoria and elsewhere.

GERMANY ADVISES TARIFF MIX-UP JUST AT PRESENT

Realizes That The President Can Not Force The Senate To Pass A Reciprocity Measure At Present.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Feb. 13.—According to the Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post, the German government definitely has decided to retreat from its position in view of the possibility of a tariff war with the United States. It is convinced that President Roosevelt is powerless to induce the senate to pass a reciprocity treaty and accordingly notified the United States Monday that if Washington confirms the informal offer made some time ago to revise the objectionable appraisement practices of American custom officials, Germany will give the United States full advantages of her conventional tariff for the year beginning March 1.

Hopes for Tariff Reform.

Germany is inspired to this action by the hope that the next congressional elections will develop a tariff reform sentiment in the United States and the consequent prospect of obtaining the concessions desired by Germany.

The Morning Post correspondent is uncertain whether the powerful agrarian party in the reichstag, which is rabidly anti-American, will sanction such arrangement, but the imperial authorities are sanguine of overcoming its resistance.

Exporters Are Bitter.

Referring to the intense bitterness of German exporters, owing to the United States ignoring the consular inventories of consignment, it is stated that Chancellor von Bulow will try to convince the reichstag that the abolition of reappraisement will be of immense value to Germany; the effects of reappraisement having been far more disastrous than even the German tariff.

What possibly he will not say is that German statesmen desire to avoid at any cost a political breach with the United States which a tariff war would entail. The emperor has successfully wooed American opinion for four years, and naturally he is most reluctant that the effects of his courtship should be abruptly extinguished. Moreover, the situation in Algeria makes him more anxious than ever to obtain the moral support of the United States.

NEW DEPARTURE AT UNIVERSITY

FARMERS' AND THEIR WIVES ARE GIVEN SPECIAL LECTURES

A NEW IDEA IS STARTED

Instead of Extension Lectures Courses Held in Madison at University.

"University Extension at Home" is the name President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin has given to the annual institutes held at the university and now in session—the housekeepers' conference and the ten days' course in agriculture for farmers. These departments have been created since President Van Hise became head of the institution, as a part of his policy of making the university with its large faculty, fine buildings and splendid equipment, of immediate service to the people of the state. It is not alone through its influence upon the characters and futures of the young people who receive college education at Madison that the state university makes itself felt; the mothers and fathers of these young people now find that there is special provision made for them also.

It was manifestly impossible for the fifty or more members of the faculty whose services are required for the elaborate programs given, to go out through the state to all the cities and towns, conducting institutes of an efficiency to be compared in any way with such as might be held at the university with its wide resources of apparatus and equipment. For this reason the faculty chose the time of year when the farmers and housekeepers of the state would have leisure to come to Madison for institute work and prepared a program of immense practical value for each of the two conferences, providing lectures by the different departments of university instruction, with illustrative demonstrations rendering the lectures more comprehensive and interesting.

Housekeepers' Conference. Under the auspices of the department of home economics, was a great success in its initial session last year and the appreciation of its practical worth is again attested in the large number of women from all parts of the state who are in attendance this year. The convention opened Tuesday morning with an address of welcome by Professor Caroline L. Hunt, head of the university department of home economics. Ex-Governor W. D. Hoard was unable to be present at the opening session, but spoke later. Miss Ellen A. Huntington, assistant in the department of home economics, gave a number of illustrated lectures on subjects of immediate interest to the housekeeper, as did also Miss Hunt. Mrs. Gertrude Sobel, a former instructor in the household science department of the University of Illinois, gave a talk on textiles, their manufacture and use, and Mrs. J. S. Donald of McHenry, Wis., spoke on the arrangement of farm buildings. On Thursday morning Dr. W. D. Frost, assistant professor of bacteriology, gave an interesting lecture on the relation of bacteriology to household economy, and Richard Fisher, state chemist, spoke on the adulteration of food. The reception planned by Miss Hunt and Miss Huntington for Thursday was postponed to Monday afternoon.

The Second Week. The program of the second week of the conference is full of notable features. George M. Wagner, instructor in the department of zoology, will explain the principles of digestion at the Monday morning session, when Miss Hunt and Miss Huntington will also have special demonstration lectures. Tuesday E. P. Sandsten of the department of horticulture in the college of agriculture will lecture on

VETERAN FIRST BASEMAN DIED IN BELOIT MONDAY

James Sheehan Passed Away Yesterday at the Age of Forty-four.

James Sheehan died in Beloit yesterday at the age of forty-four years. During the early '80s he was a partner of Joe Cantillon and was regarded as one of the greatest first basemen in the west. He was with the Beloit champions in 1882 and 1883, with Green Bay in 1884, and Eau Claire in 1887. When the Northwest league which included Milwaukee, Oshkosh, St. Paul, Duluth, and Minneapolis, was formed in 1896 he was sold to the latter city, but left the team, and went to Winnipeg after a few weeks of service. Cantillon was on this latter team and the two men were with Winnipeg and then Dubuque in the year following. That season they parted and afterwards Sheehan, who made his home at Orlinville for a time, played with Terre Haute, Peoria, Lincoln, Neb., and subsequently with Racine, Waukesha, and Whitewater. In his best days he was pronounced by Joe Cantillon the best first baseman the latter had ever seen.

JULIUS MARQUISSEE BUYS 2,100 CASES OF 1904 TOBACCO

One Thousand Case Packing of McGiffin and Fifield, and Rest of George Decker.

Julius Marquissee of New York City was in Janesville yesterday and picked up two of the last large lots of tobacco that will be sold out of southern Wisconsin until about next September when the 1905 packing has come through the sweat and is ready for the market. His purchases were one thousand cases of 1904 leaf from McGiffin and Fifield and is reported to be about their entire packing, and one thousand one hundred cases from George Decker. George Decker recently shipped seventy-five cases of 1901 leaf to London, Ontario.

There is a tendency on the part of the tobacco grower to rush in his tobacco this season. Many contracts call for delivery "about January," but these agreements were made on the supposition that a season of casing weather would be experienced in December. However, this desired condition of weather did not arrive this winter until January and consequently the handling is about a month behind the usual schedule. Now many growers, anxious only to rid themselves of the crop and secure their money, are bringing their green leaf faster than the warehouses can handle. Tobacco in the bundle cannot be stored or piled up, until the warehouses are ready to assort for the sweat would set in. Naturally the dealers are urging the growers to be patient and it is believed that the latter will heed the request. The year was a good one for the producer, the crop being up to the standard and the prices secured being above those of many former years.

The J. L. Case Threshing Machine company of Racine will soon begin the erection of a new office building at Minneapolis, Minn., to cost between $50,000 and $60,000.

The reluctant advertiser, who has to be "persuaded" before he will risk even a half-adult campaign, is described by a great writer in this way: "We do what we must, and call it by the best names we can, and would fain have the praise of having intended the result which ensues."

Winter will soon be officially over.

This year's spring election promises to be a warm contest. Outside elements may make it even a hot one.

The ice man claims that he will have ice enough yet, if the weather stays cold enough.

Postmaster Valentine is soon to take his office. Success is wished him in his undertaking of handling the Janesville office.

Oh my, how the editors of the Beloit News and Free Press love each other. One has the office the other wants. That explains it.

The time for the circuit judgeship contest is fast drawing to a close and the contest is hotter in Jefferson and Green counties than it is in Rock.

Good aldermen are cheap at five dollars a meeting. No man should hesitate becoming a candidate because the five-spot stands in the way. Patriotism demands some sacrifices.

David Rose appears to have reorganized the demoralized ranks of Milwaukee democrats for another of his whirlwind campaigns. Even the astute Zeno Host was not able to stop him.

The Milwaukee Free Press goes in to a fit because the Gazette asserts that Congressman Cooper is showing his partisanship in his appointments in the first district. The Free Press talks harmony with one hand and practices deceit with the other. It follows the old saying, "let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth."

NAILED IN THE COFFIN.

The seizure and conquest of the Philippines is likely to be the doom of the protective tariff. Through the infatuation with imperialism is to come free-trade. Lewiston (Maine) "Sun."

Whether or not this prediction shall come true, it is interesting to note the fact that out of the action of a republican house of representatives in breaking down the Dingley tariff barrier against cheap labor competition the free-traders and anti-imperialists are extracting much comfort. The democratic minority was shrewd enough to see and improve the opportunity and to contribute its help in driving nails into the coffin of protection. The nails may yet be drawn out by the senate. If so, it will be sure proof that republican leadership in that body is not as blind as a bat.

PLAYING WITH FIRE.

In a letter to the Philadelphia "Ledger," Charles W. Brown, of Sewickley, Pa., puts the case strongly when he says:

"My contention is that the beet sugar industry, under the present tariff laws, is entitled to the same assistance and consideration that is accorded to our other protected industries."

That is the whole case in a nutshell. Good morals as well as good politics support the contention. Distinctly and specifically the republican party stands pledged to protection for the domestic sugar growing industry. No other industry has ever received this definite assurance; no other product has been named in a guarantee of protection, says the American Economist. If a republican congress should so far stultify itself as to compromise the tariff involved in the Philippine free-trade bill, what will the reckoning be? The answer is more than suggested in the fifty-seven votes of republican representation of beet sugar and tobacco growing constituencies that were cast against that bill on the 16th of January. To drive so strong a minority as this into insurrection against a false policy and to be compelled to rely upon the votes of free-trade democrats to carry through the deal, may be good party management, but it doesn't look that way. It is much more like that game of playing with fire, in which somebody's fingers are sure to get burned.

THE MENACE OF A GENERAL STRIKE.

The close of the conference of coal operators and miners at Indianapolis discovered a solitary point of agreement between these producers of a national necessity. They were unanimous regarding the inevitability of a strike. This concord was such that it is impossible to say which side was more emphatic in its predictions of the catastrophe, says the New York Tribune. Both were naturally positive, for each felt that the public fear and indignation to be aroused by the prospect of a strike would be its most effective weapon to compel complete or partial surrender by the other. The public was taken as a large and silent partner into the controversy, and two months were considerably given to it which, to make an impressive exhibition of its emotions.

The bituminous coal miners demanded an increase of wages. At first 12 1/2 per cent increase was asked, but later this was modified to the vaguer demand, a "substantial increase," understood to mean a restoration in the bituminous fields of the rate of wages prevailing in 1903. In that year the boom in the demand for soft coal caused by the anthracite strike collapsed, and the miners voluntarily submitted to a cut of 5 1/2 per cent. The operators say the conditions in the coal market are no better now than they were in 1903, and that to increase wages is impossible. John Mitchell, the miners' leader, did not complain in the convention of the hard life of the workmen, but insisted that in the prosperity of the day they must have a share. He said: "The country is enjoying unprecedented industrial prosperity and the coal trade papers join in the prediction that the outlook is bright. Every factory is running, every industry is operating, every railroad is busy; never was more coal used." The anthracite miners have not yet formulated their demands.

President Mitchell and his brother officers have been working for more than two years to get all the working contracts in the bituminous districts to expire on the same date as the three-year award of the Anthracite Strike Commission, March 31, 1906. This has been accomplished, so that the coal miners, anthracite and bituminous, in one union and bound by no contract, present a united front in the demand for higher wages. A resolution passed by the United Mine Workers in convention before the conference between the bituminous operators and miners declares that no district under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers, "whether anthracite, bituminous or block coal, in the United States or Canada, shall make any agreement for a scale of wages unless all districts are included." This effectively ties up the fates of the anthracite and bituminous miners and is the culmination of Mitchell's policy. It was a lesson of the 1902 strike that the hard and soft coal workers together could deliver a heavier blow than either could deliver alone. They are now in a position to do it. If the strike threatened with such unanimity begins on April 1, within a month nearly everything will be at a standstill in the United States.

It is reported that there is only a two weeks' supply of soft coal in stock. The twenty-five or thirty millions of tons of anthracite expected to be accumulated by April 1 would carry the industries of the country only a short way. Production would be limited to the non-union mines of West Virginia and to districts where the strike order was imperfectly effective. The price of such coal as reached the market would be well nigh prohibitive. The threatened strike would dwarf by comparison that of four years ago, which will be long remembered for the losses and suffering it caused. At that time bituminous coal was being produced abundantly, and industries continued in operation, though the people suffered from want of domestic fuel. Now industrial coal is to be cut off, too, and in a few weeks, such is the threat, railroads must cease running, machinery must stop turning and industries must come to a standstill. In a word, we are brought unpleasantly to face in all its essential details with the menace of a general strike. In the hands of the workmen of one industry is the means to tie up all. No other group of wage earners, except, perhaps, the employees of all the railroads of the country, has a similar power. The general strike is the great theoretical weapon of the socialists, their dernier resort, the modern equivalent of revolution in these days, when the cost of machine guns makes the old fashioned ball and powder revolution an impossibility. It has been talked of academically in the Reichstag and the French parliament. It has been tried in Russia, but only as the united effort of all workmen. Here we are threatened with what in all its essential results, is a general strike, for the benefit of only one industry, and at the instance of a small group of leaders. There is little wonder that both sides are content to let this threat work on the public for two months. Peace may be expected, for such machinery of industrial warfare is getting too destructive to use. It is reaching a stage analogous to that often predicted of the enginery of military warfare.

The Battle Of Chicago.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The fiercest opposition to increasing the price of saloon licenses in Chicago comes from the breweries. Modern competition has forced the latter to invest heavily in the saloon business as a means of disposing of their product, and naturally they are interested in keeping the license fee down to the lowest possible limit.

His Last, Best Gift.

Ottawa (Kan.) Republic: It was a rainy morning and the cars were crowded. The conductor, a young fellow, had urged over and over again, politely, roughly, entreatingly, "Move up there. Please move into the center of the car. Plenty of room up front." The car stopped again and a woman sought to get on. The conductor gazed at the mass in the car. "Gentlemen," he said, wearily, "won't you please move up and make room for one more of God's last, best gift to man?"

Tragedy Of The Types.

Lippincott's: It was a typographical error that threatened to bring streaks of gray into the locks of the editor of a newly started weekly which purported to chronicle the doings of the smart set of a western city. In reality, however, it sold out the editor and filled the readers with a desire to see what would develop in the succeeding numbers. The subject of the paragraph was a pink luncheon given by a well known matron. When the edition was given to the public it was found that the opening lines of general eulogy were followed by the bald statement: "The luncheon was punk."

The Dells And The Dam.

Evening Wisconsin: It looks as if the scheme to dam the Wisconsin river below the Dells were going through. It looks as if a majority of the people at Kilbourn favor the project, in the expectation of material benefit to the town.

Some of the Kilbournites declare that the beauty of the Dells will survive the improvement of the water-power, while others say they "have lived on scenery long enough" and are ready to sacrifice the Dells if it be to secure enough to fill a real estate. Still others—the minority, however, as it now appears—affirm that the Dells will be ruined, and that the outcome of the project will not be to create vastly more wealth in the neighborhood than there is now, but to put money into the pockets of a few and reduce the riches of others.

Time will show which of these estimates is correct.

MERRY WAR OVER SONG

Legend That Washington Sang "Darby Ram" Disputed.

CONNECTICUT WOMEN INTERESTED

Some Daughters of American Revolution Believe Father of His Country Sang the Song to Entertain Famous Ellsworth Twins; Others Scout the Idea—Ellsworth Mansion, Nevertheless, Dedicated to D. A. R.

Whether or not Washington sang "The Darby Ram" to the Ellsworth twins is a question which is exciting interest among the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution, says a special dispatch from Derby, Conn., to the Washington Post.

At the dedication of the Ellsworth home to the use of the D. A. R. one of the songs sung was "The Darby Ram." It was stated that the Washington one, night enjoyed the hospitality of Oliver Ellsworth, he took the twins upon his knees and in jovial tones poured forth the song. This is the D. A. R. version of it:

As I was going to Derby
Upon a market day,
I spied the biggest ram, sir,
That was ever fed on hay.

CHORUS.
Oh, hokey, dinkie, Darby ram;
Oh, hokey, dinkie, Darby ram;
Oh, hokey, dinkie, Darby ram;
Oh, hokey, dinkie, dar.

He had four feet to walk, sir;
He had four feet to stand,
And every foot he had, sir,
Covered an acre of land.

The wool upon his back, sir,
It reached to the sky,
The eagles built their nests there,
For I heard the young ones cry.

The wool upon his tail, sir,
I heard the weaver say
It made three thousand yards of cloth,
For he wove it in a day.

The butcher who cut his throat, sir,
Was drowned in the blood,
And the little boy who held the bow,
Was carried away in the flood.

Since the dedication this song has been heard at many D. A. R. gatherings in the state of Connecticut, being sung upon the recent visits to Derby of Mrs. Donald McLeod of New York, the president general of the D. A. R., and the excuse for singing it has been that it was a favorite of Washington.

Some of the members of the Sarah Riggs Humphreys chapter of Derby scout the idea that the Father of His Country ever poured forth his soul in such trifling melody, even to entertain the famous Ellsworth twins. They say that the prototype of the Darby ram was a merino sheep brought from Spain to Derby by a Connecticut man, Colonel David Humphreys. It is alleged that Washington could never have heard the words of the song used today, for they were written after the sheep had reached this country, in 1929, several years after his death.

Colonel David Humphreys and his merino sheep were at the time the talk of all New England. The Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture voted him a gold medal for his "patriotic exertions in introducing into New England," this breed of sheep. The song parodied the feeling following the landing of the sheep at the Derby docks.

When the vessel reached Derby people flocked from all the country around to see the high prices offered, but Colonel Humphreys declined to speculate and distributed the sheep to responsible farmers in Connecticut and Massachusetts, selling them at $100 a head, which sum did not cover the cost. But as every one saw a fortune in the mixture of the merino and native breeds, some of the farmers were not proof against the tempting offers, and soon Humphreys' merino bucks brought from $1,500 to $2,000 and ewes brought from $1,000 to $1,500. A few bucks brought $3,000 each.

Authentic statements which have come down show that the people were merino sheep crazy. Many farmers suffered heavy losses on account of accidents, which broke up their valuable property. For instance, John Bassett of Derby refused an offer of $1,000 for a full blooded merino ewe lamb. A few days later a fox stole the lamb from the sheepfold and carried the body nearly to its den before the loss was discovered, and the trail was taken up. Two young farmers paid $1,500 for a buck, and in less than an hour after the purchase the buck died while attempting to swallow an apple. In view of this excitement it is not surprising that the Darby ram was celebrated in song.

Colonel Humphreys opened a falling mill in Sermour, after, beluging the merinos to the country and producing fine broadcloths, and there the cloth for the American-made suit of clothing which was worn by Jefferson at his second inauguration, was made from the wool of merino sheep.

While the Connecticut Daughters may not be able to determine whether Washington sang "The Darby Ram" to the Ellsworth twins, they have brought to light a good deal of information about one of Connecticut's distinguished citizens and about one of Connecticut's almost forgotten industries.

BILL TO Support Old Maids.

Representative Asa W. Elson of Columbus, O., who introduced the anti-treating bill, says he will introduce in a few days a bill that will require one bachelor to pay a special tax equal to the support of one old maid, says a Columbus dispatch. He has not the details fully worked out, but thinks men should marry by the time they are thirty anyhow.

BAER STIRS IRE OF LAWMAKERS

RESOLVE TO PROBE READING

House Adopts Resolution Naming Miners' Presidents, Mayor Weaver, Three Senators and Three Representatives as Investigators.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 13.—Angered by the public statement of President George F. Baer of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad accusing the Pennsylvania legislature of cowardice and ignorance, the legislature Monday night let loose a flood of anti-railroad resolutions.

The House adopted with a shout a resolution for an investigating committee of three representatives and three senators to act with District Presidents Fahey, Nichols and Deberry of the united mine workers, M. J. Monaghan of the Pittston, and Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia to examine the books of the Reading railroad and ascertain whether or not there is justification of the demands of the miners for more pay.

Findings to Be Public.

This committee is to make public its findings, if possible before the 1st of April, so as to assist in preventing a strike of anthracite miners.

Other resolutions require the governor to reconvene the legislature to permit the passage of acts fixing the maximum rate of railroad fare at 2 cents a mile; to prohibit the deposit of extra cash deposits of mileage books; to give electric railways the right of eminent domain, and also for the appointment of a commission to investigate the relations of various railroads to the coal mining industry. All of these were adopted unanimously.

Would Prosecute Railroads.

The senate concurred in the house resolution instructing the attorney general to proceed against the Pennsylvania, Reading, Delaware and Lackawanna railroads for alleged violation of the constitutional provision against railroads owning and operating coal mines.

The senate approved the house resolution calling on the governor to reconvene the legislature to pass an act permitting trolley companies to carry freight.

MITCHELL WILL NOT REPLY.

New York, Feb. 13.—President John Mitchell had some difficulty in maintaining his usual atmosphere of dignity and silence in New York Monday day. New York must have a lion. A few days ago it was Miss Roosevelt and her fiancé. Then came the Chinese victory and his party. Monday it was Mitchell's turn. His little office in the Ashland hotel was besieged all day, and every time the president of the miners' union appeared a dozen reporters waved Patrick Dolan's statement under his nose and demanded that he answer it instantly or forever hold his peace.

The demand for Mitchell to reply to Dolan became so insistent finally that great excitement was spread through the Ashland hotel by the tidings that Mitchell was preparing his reply. After a long hour Mitchell's complete reply to Dolan, carefully typewritten, and handed out. Here it is:

"I do not propose to be drawn into a newspaper controversy with Dolan or any one else. At the proper time, in the proper way, I shall make an answer. At the present time I am too busily engaged in solidifying the ranks of the miners and protecting their interests to say anything that would assist him in his apparent efforts to destroy their hopes and divide their strength."

Will Confer With Presidents.

T. D. Nichols, William H. Deberry, John Fahy, three anthracite district presidents, will hold the first conference with Mitchell at the Ashland and then he will confer with the scale of wages committee of the miners from the Pennsylvania region upon the articles agreed upon by the committee at the convention last week. If approved by him the articles will then be submitted to the heads of the several anthracite railroads. At this point will come the crisis deciding whether or not the greatest coal strike ever known in America will be called.

Africa's "Sneeze-Wood" Tree.

One of the natural curiosities of South Africa is the "sneeze-wood" tree, which is so-called because one cannot cut it with a saw without sneezing, as the fine dust has exactly the effect of snuff. No insect or worm will touch it; it is very bitter to the taste, and when placed in water it sinks.

THROW FROM CUTTER RESULTS IN DEATH

Whitewater Man Suchumb's Injuries Received in Accident Two Weeks Ago.

Utters Corners, Feb. 13.—Last Tuesday morning the many friends of E. Z. Weed were saddened to learn of his death at his home in Whitewater. Two weeks previous to his death he was injured by being thrown from his cutter onto the frozen ground. His injuries were very painful, but he had been gaining slowly, and his friends thought that he was on the road to recovery. He suffered considerably from being bound in a cast to keep a fractured hip bone in place, and at times the pain was very acute. Tuesday morning he asked to be moved and soon after being turned in his bed he died in a few moments. Edward Z. Weed was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 23, 1880. When eleven years old he came to Wisconsin and lived with his brother Alonzo on a farm here. In 1894 he enlisted in Company A 37th Wisconsin Volunteers and served his country until the close of the war. In June, 1894, four days before he went to the front, he was married to Miss Mary Rice. In January, 1898, they went to Mapleton, Minn., where they made their home until 1892, when they moved to Whitewater to care for Mrs. Weed's parents. His widow, one daughter, Mrs. Emerson of Michigan, one grandson and one brother survive him. The funeral was held Friday morning at ten o'clock from the home, conducted by Revs. Barnard and Stevens.

MICHIGAN MINE OUT OF COMMISSION

Severe Disturbances Caused by Air Blast Shocks Cause Rock to Fall and Choke Up Shafts.

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 13.—The Quincy mine is again practically out of commission as the result of a severe earth disturbance Sunday evening, called an earthquake or air blast shock. In No. 6 shaft falling rock broke the air pipes and the men were unable to descend.
Nos. 2, 4 and 7 shafts are also out of commission as the result of the caving in of drifts and falling of tons of rocks in the wreckage levels.
Only one shaft, No. 7 of the Monard, is not wrecked. Nearly 100 miners and other underground employees have quit and things look dark for the mine and the adjacent territory.
One shock at 6 o'clock Sunday evening shook buildings in Hancock and Houghton, rattled and smashed dishes and trinkets and caused other damage.
The people are worked to a high pitch of excitement and fear and many are making arrangements to leave the district. So far the Quincy is the only mine where serious trouble has occurred. This is accountable by the peculiar underground conditions at this mine. Most of the connecting shafts are blocked, and it is impossible to pass from one shaft to another below the surface.
Unable to Reach Bodies.
Calumet, Mich., Feb. 13.—Ten men were lowered in No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack mine Monday, but the deadly monoxide gas generated during the recent fire compelled them to return to the surface. The party reached the twenty-ninth level. Possibly another attempt will be made to locate the bodies of the three men caught in the fire. Powerful fans are in use clearing the mine of noxious gases, and it is believed work will be resumed in a week.

NEW BRIDGES ARE NEEDED BY CITY

One Alderman Says That an Ice Jam Would Be the End of the Fourth Avenue Structure.

"What the city really ought to do," said one of the aldermen this morning, "is to build two new bridges similar to the Court street structure, during the coming summer. If a good ice jam ever gets a chance at that tottering Fourth avenue ruin it will be all over with it in a very few minutes. The Jackson street bridge ought to be replaced and the Monterey bridge will have to be replanked or better still, laid with crosstie blocks during the spring or early summer. A new bridge at Fourth avenue, built after the Court street model, against which no objection has ever been raised to my knowledge, would cost about $15,000. Of course the city would have to vote on the proposition and it might be buried down as the one at Racine street was last year. I do not understand that any such questions are to be submitted to the voters at the coming election, though there is yet time to get something of the kind before the people should it be deemed advisable.

TO FORECLOSE A LARGE MORTGAGE
Central Trust Company of New York May Secure Possession of Indiana Gas Properties.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 13.—Suits to foreclose mortgages amounting, with interest, to about $6,000,000 on a network of gas properties in Indiana and Ohio were filed Monday in the United States Circuit court here by attorneys representing the Central Trust company of New York, acting as trustee for a majority of the bondholders.

The foreclosure, should the sale be ordered by the court, will affect gas properties in Jay, Randolph, Delaware, Tippecanoe, Clinton, Cass, Miami, Howard, Tipton, Grant, Adams, Blackford, Wabash, Montgomery, Boone, Hamilton and Marion counties in Indiana, and Mercer, Auglaize, Allen and Drake counties in Ohio.

Bonds in the Lima, O., Gas Light company, the Wapakoneta Natural Gas company and certificates of stock, hypothecated as collateral, in the Wapakoneta company, Celia Gas company, North Mercer Natural Gas company, Lima Gas company, St. Mary's Gas company and the Lima Gas company are also concerned in the proceedings.

The mortgages in each case were executed to secure the payment of the bonds and interest, and it was provided that after a sixty-day default in the payment of interest the entire amount of indebtedness should become due. In each case, also, it is alleged, the interest has been defaulted for three months, or three payments.

UNCLE JOE'S GALLUSES.
Why Spenser Cannot Decide to Prescribe Them For Posterity.

The home knit galluses recently given to Spenser Cannon by W. W. Russell of South Carolina, through Representative Allen, are to be handed down to posterity unworn by the distinguished statesman for whom they were made, says the Washington correspondent of the Kansas City Times.

The speaker prizes them too highly to wear them. He has written a letter to Mr. Russell acknowledging the gift, in which he says:

"In material and in name I recognize them from my familiarity with them in the early days when home-spun galluses were the order, made and knit by our mothers and in almost universal use.

"I shall put the galluses in my cabinet rather than wear them, because I desire to preserve them for my grandchildren, that they may see what we wore in my early days."

All these services will be performed free of charge, because we recognize that a happy and prosperous nation beside us is a necessity and that in order to secure this no oppression will be practiced with our consent.

FOR EMPLOYING BOY WHO WAS UNDER AGE

And Had No Permit. Local Management of Western Union Today Paid $20 Fine.

FOR EMPLOYING BOY HALF
Some time ago Trust Officer S. C. Burman made complaint against the local management of the Western Union Telegraph Co. for employing as a messenger a boy named Harry Kleeb, who was under fourteen years of age, and prosecution was commenced by District Attorney Fisher.

The law provides that children under sixteen shall attend school 32 weeks of the year. Between the ages of fourteen and sixteen, however, the municipal judge, state factory inspector, and certain other officers are empowered to grant permits to the parents of children to allow them to work, when circumstances seem to warrant such action. But in the case of children under fourteen no such permit may be granted under any circumstances, except during vacations. And in the latter periods no child under sixteen may engage in any remunerative employment in a factory, store, or similar place of business without a special permit. For infractions of this law employers can be made to pay a fine of from $10 to $100 and parents are also liable for a penalty ranging from $5 to $25. The action against the Western Union management came up in municipal court this morning, and on I. H. Carpenter's plea of "Guilty" Judge Fifield levied a fine of $20 and costs amounting to $210, both of which were paid. The Kleeb boy lacked only a few weeks of being fourteen years old at the time the complaint was made against the company, but he had received no permit and none could be granted until he should have reached that age. The few dollars he might earn were badly needed at home and it is probable that a permit would have been granted at the proper time.

NOVELTY IN CARNATIONS.
Carthage (Mo.) Florist Creates Unusual Flower of Pink Variety.

Perry, Finn, a Carthage (Mo.) florist, has originated a new carnation that promises to become more popular than the Lawson variety, says the St. Louis Republic. Mr. Finn discovered this new flower by accident.

The flower is three and one-fourth inches in diameter, and it is thought that it can be made to expand four inches by cultivation. It is perfect and is variegated in color, being a faint pink, striped with a dark pink. This is a sprout from the Eucharist, a pale pink, varying very little from Finn's creation.

Mr. Finn, in experimenting, planted the sprout one year ago last month. When this particular slip came into bloom this winter its flowers at once attracted attention, and Mr. Finn found that he had made an important creation.

The plant on which the flowers grow is similar to the carnation plant, and each plant nourishes one-half dozen flowers. The other varieties of carnations have been sold by their originators at from $20,000 to $40,000, and the Carthage florist thinks this is by far the most attractive plant of its species.

The new carnation will be known as the "Carthage carnation."

STATE NOTES

The Rev. John McCoy, who recently resigned the pastorate of the Appleton Presbyterian church, has accepted a call from the First Presbyterian church at Eau Claire.

All the ice in Green Bay north of Menominee went out yesterday morning, and with it went thousands of dollars' worth of nets belonging to Marinette and Menominee fishermen.

Frank Jacobs was robbed at Peshigo by two men who attacked him early last evening. They held revolvers to his head while they took $39 from his pockets, and then disappeared down an alley.

Positions on the police force of Kenosha are going begging, and the members of the police and fire commission have been forced to advertise for men to make application for places on the force.

Chicago detectives are in Racine looking for witnesses to the killing of Arthur Ritter, 13 years old, at Chicago by an automobile in charge of Roscoe Pennock. It is said that two leading society people were witnesses.

TREES FOR A DEPOT PLAZA.
Adornment of Grounds About Union Station in Washington.

The selection of trees for the new union station plaza at Washington is being considered with great interest by Engineer Commissioner Biddle, by Superintendent of Parking Latham and other Washington officials, and many novel features have been incident to the quest, says the Washington Star. Because it has been determined to make of the plaza a formal entrance way to the great station, the engineer department has decided that the trees to be planted must be symmetrical in form and of a kind likely to grow evenly. It is also stated as desirable that the trees be of a variety which keeps its leaves as late as possible in the fall.

Looking to the attainment of these several ends the search for a desirable species of tree has narrowed down in passing weeks to the red oak and the pin oak, both of which have been found to meet the requirements as to regularity of form and size. The final test of each is now progressing, the superintendent of parking watching carefully to see which variety of tree holds its foliage the longer. It is stated as most likely that the pin oak will be the one chosen, but this will not be finally determined until the question of leaves is settled.

Probably the longest rows of pin oaks in Washington are on Pennsylvania avenue southeast, east of Eleventh street. West of Eleventh street on the same thoroughfare are red oaks.

In investigating the "habits" of the various kinds of trees it has been found that the dates of dropping leaves in different trees of the same variety are not always the same. Sometimes this is noticed in only one tree in a long row being different from its fellows. After the variety of tree to be planted has been selected great care will be taken in going over the nursery stock so that uniformity in every feature may, as nearly as possible, be secured. Altogether it is estimated about 150 trees will be required for planting on the union station plaza.

SIMPLE SYRUP.

I recently told you how to make all kinds of infusions from common herbs; but I find that as soon as one want is supplied a few more appear, and this time several correspondents want to know how to prepare medicinal syrups.

If you were to receive a prescription from a physician, and he desired to prescribe some remedy in which there was simple sirup, the chances are a hundred to one that he would write it "Syr. Simplex;" this, you would naturally not understand--the meaning is simple sirup. And if you were to go into almost any kitchen in the country and ask the good housewife to make you some sugar sirup she would make it, without referring to any medical authority, out of sugar and water.

If I were asked to tell her just how to make it, I would say, pour two pints of boiling water upon a scant two pounds and a half of dry white sugar; place upon a hot stove, and stir occasionally until it starts to boil, when it should be instantly removed; if it is not then removed it will get thick and sugary. This will make one quart of simple sirup, and there may be added to it essence of ginger, peppermint or orange flower by way of flavoring. One ounce of fluid extract added to three ounces of simple sirup will make the average medicinal sirup. Dose, one teaspoonful.

Some agents are mild, and in those cases double the average proportion of two tablespoonfuls may be used; while of other agents having a great deal of strength and action, one-half teaspoonful will be sufficient.

Some stomachs revolt against every form of sirup, and yet cannot endure infusions. It is also sometimes inconvenient to continually prepare them in protracted cases. Under such circumstances a vehicle for fluid extracts may be prepared by adding two ounces of glycerine to 12 ounces of a rather thick mucilage of gum arabic. Such a vehicle is well-suited to take the place of sirup, when it is desired to administer remedies to persons suffering from diabetes or obesity. Alcohol is sometimes used instead of glycerine as a preservative, but under all circumstances it should be remembered that alcohol does not in any way add to the remedial properties of a compound, but simply serves as a preservative or as an extractive.

MEDICINAL SYRUPS.

Medicinal syrups are prepared on the following basis: To compound a half-gallon of medicinal sirup use on an average one pound of coarsely ground drugs. Place these in a porcelain or very new tin kettle and cover them with water, eight parts, and alcohol one part, and then tightly cover the kettle and allow all to stand in a cool place for 24 hours, at the end of which time the liquid should be strained into a suitable vessel, and allowed to stand in the closed kettle for four hours.

Have at hand a large funnel, also an unbleached muslin sack, prepared to fit within it. Snugly close the mouth of the funnel with cotton and then adjust the bag and fill in the drugs with the hot water and press down firmly. Allow the water to drip through rapidly three times, when it will be rather clear. Add enough cold water to this to make one part, and then let all drip through slowly and add to it the alcohol and water first strained out, and set aside. This should make about one quart and a pint.

To this should be added now four pounds of pure white sugar, slightly stirring over a slow fire to dissolve the sugar, and to drive off the alcohol used as an extractive. Then add four ounces of glycerine, as a preservative. Smaller quantities of drugs are difficult to handle, and twice the quantity will be found much more convenient, making a gallon of sirup, which will keep any length of time in ordinary well stoppered bottles without sealing.

I have now given you the simplest and plainest instruction at my command for making tinctures, extracts and syrups. These methods are scientifically correct, although they have been couched in language so simple and plain that anyone with average intelligence can prepare the ingredients. There may be an occasional failure to get things just right, and sometimes it may be found necessary to experiment a little in regard to the dosage.

In preparing home remedies, it is necessary to use a large quantity of the ingredient which an old negro cook said that she always used, when asked to give a formula, or recipe, for compounding some of her most excellent dishes, and that was "judgment," or good common sense. Some herbs will have more strength than others have grown in a better locality, and have gathered at the proper time; such will be found much more effective in their action than those of an inferior quality; therefore, as I said before, always put a little judgment into your compounds when making them, and again when administering them to the sick.

Some patients require a much larger dose of any given remedy than others; therefore, when you attempt to relieve another's ills you should make some study of that patient's constitution, and ascertain if possible what the usual effect of the remedies is. Some people seem to be born with a natural aptitude in caring for the sick, and they are nearly always successful; their touch is soothing, and their presence in the sickroom has a quieting and very best of nurses and are always in demand.

CLUB NOTES.

Illinois.—Dr. David H. Reeder, La Porte, Ind.—Dear Sir: We are readers of this paper, and I would be more than thankful if you could tell me what to do for myself. I have been suffering from a pain in my right shoulder and under the shoulder blade and in the whole right side, for about six years. I have doctored with various physicians, but without any benefit; therefore I have made up my mind to ask your advice. I am 28 years old, married and have two children.

The pain in my shoulder is very bad just now. Sometimes it is so bad that I cannot do anything with my right arm, and shoulder just gives out. Have a burning sensation in right side and pains in my stomach and bowels and across the back. Am also very short of breath. If I catch cold I am worse. Often have a dull headache. I must always take a physic or use injection for my bowels, which does not do much good.

I am a big eater and am almost afraid to eat as much as I desire, but I have to work hard, as we live on a farm, and always have plenty to do. I have catarrh in my head with a dropping of phlegm in the throat, making it necessary for me to clear throat often. I am afraid to take much medicine for my trouble, as I am afraid it might be injurious.

I am so anxious to hear from you, hoping you can tell me what to do so I can get well and then I would be the happiest person living, for I have suffered so long. I read every letter that is published in the paper and cut them out and gave them. Thanking you for any advice you may give, I am, Respectfully, Mrs. P. S.

I am inclined to think that a large portion of your suffering is caused by overeating. It is not so much the quantity of food as the assimilation of what is eaten that gives one strength to do a great deal of work. It is evident that the various organs of elimination do not properly perform their duties and you are to some extent poisoned by the waste matter which should be promptly eliminated. Continual dosing with cathartics will in time reduce your health to a most miserable condition. Adopt the Home Health Club method of eating as described in the Club Book and so frequently in these lectures, and you will find that less than one-half the quantity will amply satisfy your wants, while at the same time your general health will greatly increase.

For all the other troubles enumerated, carefully follow the directions given in my private letter.

Freeport.—Dr. David H. Reeder, La Porte, Ind.—Dear Dr. Reeder: Can you make a suggestion for the relief of my poor old body? I suppose I must call it old, others do. But I am almost through with it, and only need to patch it up a little here and there. I shall soon leave it, I presume, as I have occupied it nearly 80 years, and it has served me well—I dislike to have it suffer while I remain in it. During these many years myself and family have lived according to the teachings of good old Dr. Thompson, and used only the herb remedies such as Nature gives us so bountifully, and we were well and happy. My husband's body died a few years ago, but he is still living in the higher life, where I expect to join him. While serving him, my body was strained and a severe pain in my right side still remains, though not so bad as at first. I describe it more closely in a separate letter. I enjoy your great work. It is good to see unselfish devotion to humanity. The reward is always certain. I have read this paper since it was first published. It is good. Sincerely yours.—Mrs. S. E. D.

The pains you have so well described, may be, as the local doctor says, of a rheumatic nature, but I think they originate in a strain of the muscles. Use the remedy which I have written you for rheumatism and neuralgia and in addition apply thorough hot fomentations to all of the right side and spine. Allow it to remain on for 30 or 40 minutes and after remaining, rub first with hot vinegar then follow that with a thorough rubbing with warm olive oil, after which cover with flannel and go to bed. Next morning the pain will be almost entirely gone, and another treatment will probably complete the cure. I wish to congratulate you upon your long, happy and useful life. I know that many will rise up and call you "blessed." Our bodies are simply a temporary dwelling place, and I wish that more could realize it. I thank you for your kind words for me and for this paper.
